

THE NEW PLAYS

"Nice People"
Hits Rich Rowdies.

By CHARLES DARTON

Everything was new in West 45th Street last night—the Klav Theatre, in gray and gold and jade, with the orchestra playing mysteriously above the boxes; the star, Francine Larrimore, defying Billie Burke; and the play "Nice People," with Rachel Crothers sticking her pen into wealthy young rowdies. The play was the chief thing of interest, because of the idea it set forth.

Miss Crothers is always intelligent and she has a discerning eye for material. It has not escaped her keen vision that young people with more money than brains deserve to have a halt called on them, and she is right when she makes a plea for breeding, culture and common sense in this country. She goes even further by declaring, through one of her characters, that America is infinitely worse than Europe in its dissipation. Aside from the so-called war reaction—which to my mind is all nonsense—she gets pretty close to the truth. She means, of course, that fools who spend their money and their lives for the sake of amusement are no good to themselves or their country. Perhaps she remembers the French Revolution.

But in the first part of her play Miss Crothers gives a somewhat sensational view of life in a Park Avenue apartment, a license to liquor, profanity and impudence that was had enough to be true in the days or nights of the old Tenderloin. Having lived in New York scarcely twenty years I know nothing of "goings-on" such as these. I can't imagine a Park Avenue father peeling off $40 to his young daughter for a "party" after she and her friends have become somewhat hilarious in his home. In fact, I was surprised to find that a father was an inhabitant of this gay place, but when he appeared it was easy enough to believe that his daughter might be something more than a chit of the old block. Without adding another syllable, the fact remains that the father is at fault, for he gives his daughter $20,000 a year and then pays her "expenses." The wonder is that the girl hasn't gone to the devil long ago, thanks to her father.

It happens that "Teddy" sneaks out of Park Avenue into a roadhouse, and after a night of dancing, motoring along until she comes to her little $20,000 farm. She thinks she loves "Spottie," but he talks about money and goes to sleep. A young stranger therefore bursts in upon the rich young maiden and during a thunderstorm she listens to his sensible talk. He is a simple youth and he gives up a ten-thousand-a-year job in New York to work with her on her $2,000 farm. He refuses to take her millions, but as she can't get rid of them, he agrees to marry her. And there you are, so far as values are concerned! At any rate, Miss Larrimore's red hair is an asset.

SALTUS ART MEDAL
WON BY C. H. DAVIS

"Sunny Hillside" Canvas Awarded
Prize by National Academy of Design.

Prizes for the ninety-sixth annual exhibition of the National Academy of Design, which will be open to the public from Saturday until April 3, in the Fine Arts Building, No. 215 West 57th Street, have just been announced.

The Saltus gold medal, most coveted by artists, given for a work of art either painting or sculpture, distinguishable not to be affected by nationality, age, sex, membership in any art society or any other condition than merit, was awarded to Charles H. Davis for "Sunny Hillside," landscape in oils.

Among the other awards were the following: Thomas B. Clarke prize of $300 for the best American figure composition, painted by an American citizen, to Leon Kroll, for "In the Hills." Carnegie prize of $100 for the most meritorious oil painting, excepting portraits, by an American artist, to John F. Polinsek for "Jersey Waterfront."
